Subject: Accessing or Commenting on Leaked Classified Documents

Importance: High

Ladies and Gentlemen,

As a professional courtesy, please allow me to remind all of our responsibilities to protect the network and sustain our SF312 responsibilities.

Any classified information that may have been unlawfully disclosed and released on the Internet is not 'declassified' by an appropriate authority and therefore requires continued classification and protection as such from government personnel.

Those that have signed a SF 312 should know that accessing the Wikileaks web site or any other such site from any computer may be viewed as a violation of the SF-312 agreement.

Any discussions concerning the legitimacy of any documents or whether or not they are classified must be conducted within controlled or restricted areas. The documents should not be viewed, downloaded, or stored on your SSS unclassified network computer or home computer; they should not be printed or retransmitted in any fashion.

DO NOT post links to these documents nor make comments on social media sites such as Facebook or through Twitter. Engaging in these activities would call into question your ability to deal with confidential information, which is part of most positions within the federal government.

If an employee opens the document on an unclassified system it creates a security violation which can turn into disaster recovery, cleaning classified documents off an unclassified computer.

I realize this also can occur on home computers. I am only protecting the agency's interest.

Any incident of this nature should be reported immediately to your supervisor and I as soon as possible.
